Guide to a Successful Onsite Visit

Shadow an Onsite Tour

- Prior to taking over an account, shadow an Account Manager who takes you onsite to the client, introduces you to contacts and supervisors, and provides a detailed walk through of the plant. Take notes! What to look for:
    - What is the work environment like?
        - Temperature, smells, size of the plant, cleanliness, employee attire
    - What type of work are our associates performing?
        - Are the associates operating machines, doing assembly or quality inspection work, are they operating a forklift and if so what kind, are the positions physical or lighter duty, are the associates standing up or is sit down work offered, are they working independently or as part of a team?

What to Bring With You

- Ask your HR contact if they have a company Org Chart they could share that includes photos of the supervisors so you're able to identify them during visits.
- Print out a roster of active associates and who they report to so you're able to follow up with the appropriate supervisor in person to ask how the associate is performing on their team.
- Referral cards to share with supervisors
- If you own any WSI swag, supervisors and associates appreciate being able to recognize you onsite by your WSI attire as a bonus

Follow Ups with Supervisors

- Know where your associates stand - do you need to chat with a supervisor about any concerns that were brought to your attention, attendance issues, performance concerns, time off requests, etc.?
- Have you emailed a supervisor and still not received a response back? Note this for your visit and be sure to follow up with the supervisor in person

Follow Ups with HR

- Stop in to visit with your HR contacts to simply say hello and ask how their week is going or to touch base on any questions or items that may need addressed. Any form of face time with the client making our presence known is a win!
- Has it been a minute since you've visited? Grab their favorite coffee on your way in to drop off as you say hello!
